Reference Letter

To whom it may concern,

I have known Margarita as a student since 2019. I taught her two disciplines: Journal Journalism Ethics (fourth semester) and the profile subject Modern Print Media and Practice (fifth and sixth semesters).

During studying Margarita demonstrated self-motivation and commitment to research field of modern humanities. She showed a deep interest in the study of the theory and practice of media. A person's potential is manifested in how much effort they put into solving even ordinary tasks, especially if it does not bring them a momentary reward. From my point of view, Margarita is a brilliant student, for whom the first place has always been acquiring knowledge and improving skills.

Margarita has always demonstrated analytical abilities and critical thinking, which enabled her to maintain objectivity and impartiality when performing tasks. As part of the course, Margarita successfully defended her own projects (for example, the content plan for a media startup), as well as group projects (investigation of the demolition of historical buildings in St. Petersburg, etc.). She also coped well with individual tasks of fact-checking, information research and working with system registries.

The development of modern science is impossible without relations in the international scientific community. This is especially important for young professionals, for whom such cooperation opens up new opportunities not only for their own development, but also for bringing new ideas into the scientific environment of their home institution. That is why our university and I personally support such initiatives.

I can confidently recommend Margarita for a Master's degree. I am sure that she will be an excellent student, and will demonstrate high results in her further education.

Sincerely,
Margarita Litvinova
